Steel Cases Bullets.

The discovery of a secret bullet by which leaden bullets can be made to penetrate armor superior to steel-cased bullets, is announced by Charles W. Bales, a chemist, and Edward Gerry, a surgeon of Springfield, Ill. The ordinary leaden bullets, when used in the Krag-Jorgensen rifle, have been found to be too soft and the lead has clung to the barrel of the rifle until the barrel was finally clogged and the rifle rendered useless.

Which have succeeded the lead ones have eventually torn the barrel—faults not found in the new article. In pursuing their experiments these inventors, it appears, succeeded in procuring some of the smokeless powder used by the government in the Krag-Jorgensen rifles, making numerous tests with their cartridges, and with results showing the remarkable efficiency of the new and secret preparation. Thus, at a distance of thirty yards, the bullet, shot from a Krag-Jorgensen rifle, penetrated a target of armor plate, and also through a flat-iron; in this latter case the bullet lodged in a tree, entering a distance of six inches.

GOOD TRADE IN WOLF SCALPS

County Makes Extensive Purchases of the Imported Article.

THRIVING INDUSTRY SUDDENLY CHECKED

Sheriff Detects Bill Rapp in the Midst of a Denial, but the Smooth Young Man Slips Away.

"We don't like to tell just how much the county has paid out for wolf scalps in the last few months," remarked an attaché of the county auditor's office yesterday, "but it has been heavier than for many years. We have been told by people whom we know and whom we have no reason to doubt, that there are more wolves in the Boyer valley and in the river bottoms north of the city than has ever been known before, and each of the regular wolf hunters has been much larger than ordinarily. The great number offered for the collection of the 45 bounty paid by the county has excited some suspicion that the county has been defrauded by being obliged to pay for wolves killed elsewhere and shipped in here, and the startling discovery announced in the Sunday morning papers was the natural result of the investigations that were started. More than twenty wolf scalps presented since September 1 was piling them up a little too fast."

The county authorities are pretty well satisfied that the wolf hunters have been doing a thriving business all summer, and they are more than anxious to catch Bill Rapp, the young man who deposited a batch on the auditor's counter on Friday, which he had just received by express from Cheyenne, Wyo., but Rapp has succeeded in losing himself in the crowd, and the officers, only two vague clues to indicate the direction he took after he left Council Bluffs at 11 o'clock on Friday night. They only know that he boarded a Rock Island train for Chicago.

Inquiries and discoveries made yesterday have convinced the officers that Rapp and others have been engaged in the business of collecting wolf scalps for some time in western Iowa all summer and making big profits. In the early part of the summer Rapp was creating a number of times by appearing in the city and offering scalps for the west via the box car route. It was learned that he went to Cheyenne, where he had a brother at work for one of the cattle companies in the collection of wolf scalps that he sent here and upon which he attempted to collect the bounty the Warner Cattle company, by W. H. Rapp, appears as the collector. The bounty was in Rapp's sack addressed to himself. Rapp reached here the day of their arrival.

Someone took the liberty to open the sack and discover its contents, and notified the sheriff's office. The sack was opened and a private mark was placed on each of the skins. An hour later they were presented for collection of the bounty. Owing to the fact that a warrant was being prepared for Rapp at the time he was not taken into custody, and he was permitted to take the required bounty for the skins.

Two warrants were issued, one charging perjury and the other obtaining money under false pretenses. Rapp failed to get the bounty for the skins for the reason that the auditor had put into force an order requiring the wolf hunters to file their claims and permit the county board to pass upon them before the money is paid.

For Disturbing the Mission.

In the police court yesterday morning Roy Tolman, Joe Pruitt, Alonzo Slicker and Harry Bell were arraigned on the charge of disturbing a religious meeting. The offense was committed at the night school, held on East First street. The evidence showed that two of the boys were drunk and using profane and obscene language at the doors of the mission, and that when one of the mission people went to the door to request them to leave or assist they assaulted him. The evidence showed that Pruitt and Tolman were the chief offenders and a fine of $50 and costs was imposed on each. This means a term of thirty days in the city jail. The boy is only 17 years of age, and is the only child of his widowed mother. She has been trying to get him through the public schools, and until he has been sent to the city jail, he has been a great trouble to her. He passed the examination for admission to the High school and would have begun his work there with the commencement of the present term, but he refused to go after his mother had been arrested. He has been living in idleness and has been a great trouble to her.

Woman Wonders.

The police were advised yesterday evening that a woman, evidently insane, was wandering around on East First street, and officers were sent to look her up. At 3 o'clock she was standing on the corner of Broadway and South First street. She was carrying a small hand satchel and when the officer approached her she threw this away and ran swiftly around the corner and disappeared on one of the dark streets. A diligent search failed to find her. The satchel was taken to the police station and opened. It was found to contain several letters. One was addressed to Mrs. Ella Kella, 2108 N. Grand, and was from a man named John Wood, Pa. and was evidently from the woman's daughter, and referred to her as having recently left there to go to South Omaha.

The woman was found to have wandered around on First street during a greater part of the afternoon. She is described as being quite tall, light complexion, thin, about 40 years of age, and was dressed in a blue dress, with a black belt and a black hat. She was wearing a black silk dress, with a black belt and a black hat. She was carrying a small hand satchel and when the officer approached her she threw this away and ran swiftly around the corner and disappeared on one of the dark streets.

DERVISHES PUNISH UNFRIENDLY TRIBE

Country Laid Waste, the Men Killed and Women Slave and Captivity—English Advance on Osman Digna.

CAIRO, Oct. 25.—A column of troops commanded by General Hunter, it is announced in a dispatch from Berber, on the Nile, has started to drive Osman Digna, the great dervish general, from the Atbara river. The dispatch adds it is feared Osman Digna will not wait for the Anglo-Egyptian troops to attack him.

Details just obtained of the revenge of the dervishes upon the Jaalin tribe, caused by the refusal of the latter to join the forces of the khalfas against the British, show it to have been terrible in the extreme. The left bank of the river between Berber and Metemeh was practically depopulated. The dervishes burned every male member of the offending tribe and took every woman to their harems after selecting 150 selected virgins to the khalfas. The dervishes in addition threw many women and children into the river.

Little Girl is Taken Sick and Dies in Four Days.

ATLANTIC, Ia., Oct. 25.—(Special Telegram.)—Citizens of Atlantic are much excited over a most malignant case of scarlet fever from which Annie Stech, aged 10 years, died yesterday morning. It is feared the disease will spread and the whole town become infected.

Little Annie Stech was in school Thursday. On Friday she stayed at home. On Saturday many of her playmates were at the house and played with her. In the evening the doctor was called and diagnosed the case as scarlet fever. It was not until Sunday that the child was dead.

Today before the funeral the casket was upon the front porch and, like flowers, was photographed at the same time. The bed linen was flapping in the strong wind and in direct line with the wind and the child's body was seen. All the neighbors took all the circumstances together it has caused no little excitement.

Annie's brother is now in bed with the same disease, but he is recovering.

Young Man Shoots Another White Larking with a Gun.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Oct. 25.—(Special Telegram.)—At Covington yesterday morning, while a number of young men were gathered in the store of James H. Fisher, Fisher picked up a young man with silver hair and told W. L. Rowland, the night operator of the Milwaukee road at that place, that he could knock him down with it quicker than he could count to ten. Rowland, who was a revolver, had just been showing a revolver he carried from which he had removed the cartridge, but had reloaded it.

Rowland lowered the revolver and pulled the trigger. The bullet passed through the heart and Fisher died in thirty minutes. That is the latest point in all dress-making for the season. Let the costume itself be as sober as you please, but make the collar a little brighter, and you will find every woman will give you a kindly little glance of admiration in passing.

THE BASSO SILENCED BY A GUN.

J. Russell Powell, the basso at Central Avenue Methodist church, relates the incident of the Indianapolis Journal, was his farewell appearance at the service Sunday morning and a large number of the friends of the promising young singer had come to hear him sing his last song there. Mr. Powell had two of the best numbers in his repertoire for that morning and was in excellent voice when he reached the church, but a most curious circumstance silenced his voice temporarily. Just as Mr. Powell stepped into the choir and began to sing a note from his nose and caused him to sneeze violently and the sneeze brought on a severe cough, which in turn ruptured one of the small blood vessels near the vocal cords. He took his place in the choir, but he could not utter a sound audible five feet away. Mr. Powell left the choir and Dr. L. C. Cline, who was in the audience, was summoned to attend him. Mr. Powell's injury to his voice will not prove serious.
